

I go to him/her and tell her politely that I feel angry and ask for never doing it again

It make me feel sad but I don't react. It is normal

Somebody calls you names or reveals your secret to other people without permissions

You ask your friend to borrow you something important but he/she didn't agree

I understand that everybody has right to say no.

I will never talk with that person again

I will wait until he or her will apologise. It was her/his fault that I got so angry

You have a quarrel with your friend in which you raised your voice

You are in the coffee shop. The waitress don't talk directly to you

I say "It will be nice if you will talk directly to me"

I tell "I am sorry, I shouldn't raise my voice. Can we talk about it again?"

I will chose the first bus that will arrive

I will ask for help somebody who is standing on a bus stop

I am angry but I don't react. It is normal

You want to use public transport to get to your home but you don't know which line you have to choose

